The Family

Our Ill and Shut-ins

Bill Leonard is pain free from the back surgery. He has six more weeks of limited activity. However, he is concerned that he may be getting the shingles!

Carl Bean got a good report from his doctor this week.

Barbara Polk extends her thanks to everyone who has called, visited, or sent cards to her.

Helen Flowers is doing well. Her daughter, Linda, expresses her thanks for all the prayers.

On the Lighter Side

One night a burglar decided to burgle a safe in a mom and pop grocery store.

On the safe door was a note that read "Please don't use dynamite. The safe is not locked. Just turn the handle." He followed the instructions.

Instantly a heavy sandbag fell on him, the entire store was floodlighted, and alarms started sounding. As the police carried him out on a stretcher, he was heard moaning: "My confidence in human nature has been terribly shaken."

"The Internet Is Where Religion Goes To Die"

On September 29, 2011, I debated Blair Scott, the Director of Communications for American Atheists, Inc. During the debate, he made several comments regarding religion in general and Christianity specifically. One of the more memorable statements he made was: "The Internet is where religion goes to die." I remember sitting on stage thinking that this statement was completely without merit, and the statistics from the Apologetics Press site alone show just how false it is.

So far, in 2011, the Lord has used the Apologetics Press Web site to disseminate an average of 662,900 electronic pages of information every month. That means that if things continue like this for the rest of the year, the site will receive 7.95 million hits this year alone. That is an average of about 21,853 pages a day, 910 pages an hour, 15 pages per minute, or about one page clicked every four seconds. While it may be true that some "religions" go to die on the Internet, New Testament Christianity is not one of them. In fact, the Word of God is living and powerful (Hebrews 4:12), and it never returns to the Lord void (Isaiah 55:11).

We would encourage all of our readers to have a part in spreading God's Word via the Internet. If your church or business has a Web site, link it to the A.P. site. That will boost our ratings on Web search engines, and will provide your visitors with an opportunity to access scripturally sound, relevant materials. Tell your friends on Facebook about the site. Send them links to specific articles that you think might interest them. The Web and our site (along with many other solid brotherhood sites) are a great way to fulfill the great commission of going into all the world and teaching the Gospel. In truth, the Internet is one place where New Testament Christianity goes to thrive.

When We All Get To Heaven

There is a wondrously upbeat song that many love to sing in our worship services. The refrain goes like this:

When we all get to Heaven,
What a day of rejoicing that will be!
When we all see Jesus,
We'll sing and shout the victory!

The problem with that song is that not all will be going to heaven. Jesus, himself, said: "Not everyone who says to Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven" (Matthew 7:21).

Now, I understand the intent of the songwriter (E. E. Hewitt). She pictured a group of faithful Christians singing this hymn in honor of God and Jesus. In that context, she is right. But when this song is sung by those who are not faithful then it's a different story.

In some songbooks, Christian editors have changed the lyrics to read: "When the saved get to heaven." Perhaps that's a better reflection of Mrs. Hewitt's intent and certainly the truth.

Think about it. When you sing that song, are you sure you will be in that company? If not, I'd like to visit with you.
